Copyright policy

We ask only for the right to publish articles. We do not seek to own them.

We believe that it is our responsibility to disseminate research as widely as possible. But it confounds dissemination to take authors' copyrights in hopes of collecting supplementary fees for research use or classroom use or other non-commercial uses. Such taking restricts use. We owe our authors and other colleagues not to do it. We do not.

Moreover, in return for publishing their work, we require our authors to allow that work to be used freely for non-commercial purposes.

To help our authors further, we also give each copyright holder the completed, typeset pdf files — produced at our expense — of his/her article. Authors then use them for efficient and inexpensive reprint distribution.

We embody our policy in the two documents that follow:

- the copyright statement in each issue of EER
- the publishing agreement signed by the copyright holder.

It is strictly forbidden to make copies of whole issues of this journal for any purpose without the express written permission of Evolutionary Ecology Ltd. Subscribing institutions/libraries may grant individuals the privilege of making a single copy of an article for non-commercial educational or non-commercial research purposes. Subscribing institutions/libraries may also use articles for non-commercial educational purposes by making any number of copies for course packs or course reserve collections. Subscribing institutions/libraries may also loan single copies of articles to non-commercial libraries for educational purposes. All copies of articles must preserve their copyright notice without modification. All articles are copyrighted by their authors. All authors endorse, permit and license Evolutionary Ecology Ltd. to grant its subscribing institutions/libraries the copying privileges specified above without additional consideration or payment to them or to Evolutionary Ecology Ltd. These endorsements, in writing, are on file in the office of Evolutionary Ecology Ltd. Consult authors for permission to use any portion of their work in derivative works, compilations or to distribute their work in any commercial manner.

PUBLISHING AGREEMENT

I hereby grant Evolutionary Ecology, Ltd. permission to publish my manuscript:

in the journal Evolutionary Ecology Research, in print and on the Internet. I further agree not to publish it elsewhere beforehand, and for one year after its publication in Evolutionary Ecology Research.

I retain all other rights. To that effect, Evolutionary Ecology Research will include the notice of copyright in my name on the first page of the paper.

I am aware that EEL is dedicated to the dissemination of scholarly information for non-commercial use. I endorse, permit and license EEL's liberal policies of non-commercial use of my manuscript for research, teaching and personal study. I endorse, permit and license EEL and its non-profit subscribers to allow

- each individual to make, gratis, a single copy of the published manuscript, whether from its print or its Internet version
- instructors to make, gratis, multiple copies available for non-commercial teaching purposes
- libraries to make copies available, gratis, for interlibrary loan.

I agree to charge no fee for these privileges, nor will EEL.
